

Effective Study Habits of Students:

The key to become an effective student is learning to know how to study smarter not harder. The majority of successful students achieve their success by developing and applying effective study habits.

- Do not attempt to memorize all your study in one session. The successful students typically space their work over short periods of time. They do not try to give a go in one shot/attempt. You need to be consistent in your studies & have regular study periods.
- Plan when you are going to study. The successful students schedule and set a specific time for the whole week ~~and~~ when they are going to study. Then they stick to the schedule. The student who do not have a definite study plans they usually do not perform well.
- Should create and follow a consistent study routine. When you study at the same time each day and each week, the studying would become a regular part of life. The student would be mentally and emotionally prepared for each study session & then study session would become more productive.

- Every study time should have a specific goal. Studying without direction will not be effective. You should know exactly what you need to accomplish during each study session.

- Review your notes always before starting the assignment. Always make sure that you have very good class notes. Initially thoroughly review your notes & then proceed to complete the assignment correctly. This would enable you to remember important points & topics and would make sure that the studying targeted is very effective.

- Avoid all the distractions while studying. The distractions can be your mobile laptop, television or any other thing of interest. Even your family can be a distraction. If you are distracted you tend to lose your chain of thoughts. You are unable to focus and result will be very ineffective.
